THIS WEEK:

Digital Parenting

Digital parenting describes the efforts and actions parents take in digital environments to comprehend, support, and regulate children's activities .

Digital media has altered the ways in which parents and children communicate, have fun, find information, and solve problems daily - especially now in COVID-19 home confinement.

A big part of digital parenting includes the different behaviors parents adopt to mediate children's engagement with the Internet and digital media.

With increasing screen times, online learning, social media, and virtual communication, it is evident that the challenges parents face are in parallel to developing technology. That is why we at KidsTechWorld believe it is so important for families to develop positive and healthy relationships with technology - which all starts with digital parenting!

Positivity is key!
